year of changes bold and strong. This was how the White House described the year 1971. The prognosis for the following year was much the same. Radical changes were expected for the year 1972. Changes were expected around the city, the state, the nation and even the world. The same statements would apply to Thomas Carr Howe High School in the years 1971-72. The year at Howe has been a succession of changes. New students, new teachers, new courses and new programs have changed the school and its curriculum. Over 1000 new students converged on the school in September. Representing varied socioeconomic backgrounds, the new students brought the Howe Population to a new high point. In accordance with Federal Judge S. Hugh Dillon's ruling concerning the Indianapolis Public School's integration situation, several teachers were transferred to and from Howe.

rin

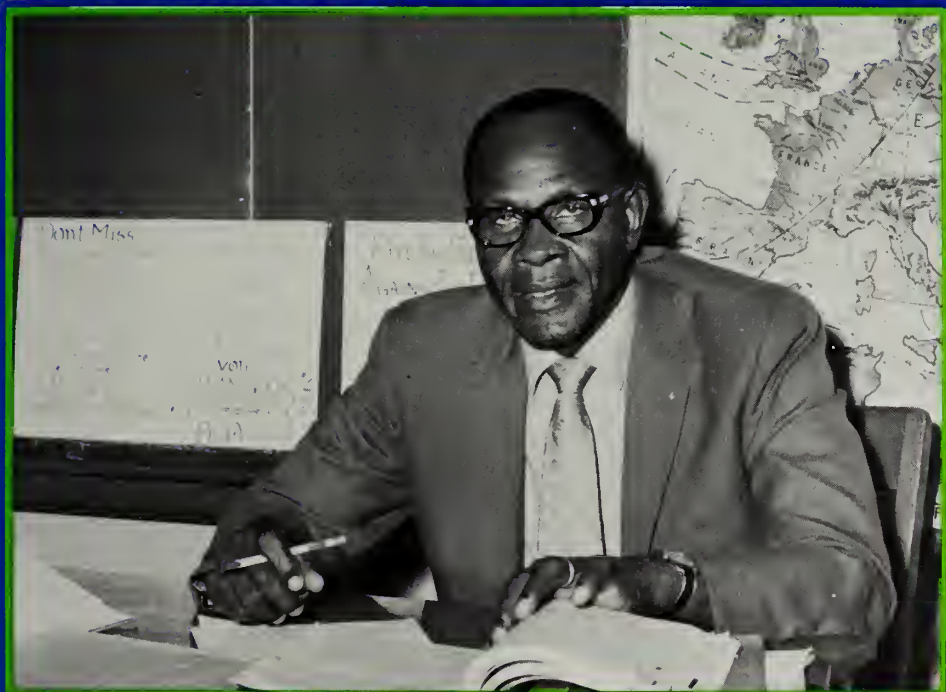

A decrease in student population during the second semester caused by January graduates, transfers to Evening School, and losses, reduced the number of teaching assignments. New work-study programs were added in the business and health departments. Students held jobs in the business-community half of the school day and spent the other half in classes. A city wide emphasis was placed on individual reading skills, and Howe adapted its reading facilities accordingly. Other programs were dropped because of lack of finances. But while the visible changes were made, the individual changed, too. He changed in his thinking, his actions, his beliefs, and his attitudes towards his school and towards his own existence.

One thousand new students raised the population of Howe to over 2600. The freshman class outnumbered the seniors who graduated in 1971. In addition, students who were formerly in a racial majority had the option to transfer to a school in which they would be in a minority. Federal Judge S. Hugh Dillon ruled that the schools were guilty of segregation of the schools and prescribed some measures to help in the integration of the schools. Teacher transfers, majority to minority, and near suburban school systems participating in the integration program were suggested to improve the quality of education for all of the students involved.

Cooperative Office Education (COE) and Health Careers were other work-study courses offered this year. Coe was offered during the second semester. The program allowed students to work in business offices in the Indianapolis area. Students carried a minimum schedule of classes at Howe, enrolled in related instruction, and worked a minimum of three hours a day in such capacities as typists, secretaries, sales personnel, and other business positions. Health Careers was adopted along much the same lines. Students enrolled in this course worked in their chosen fields of medicine. Nearby hospitals, veterinary clinics, and doctor's offices provided experience for students interested in pursuing a career in medicine.

Room

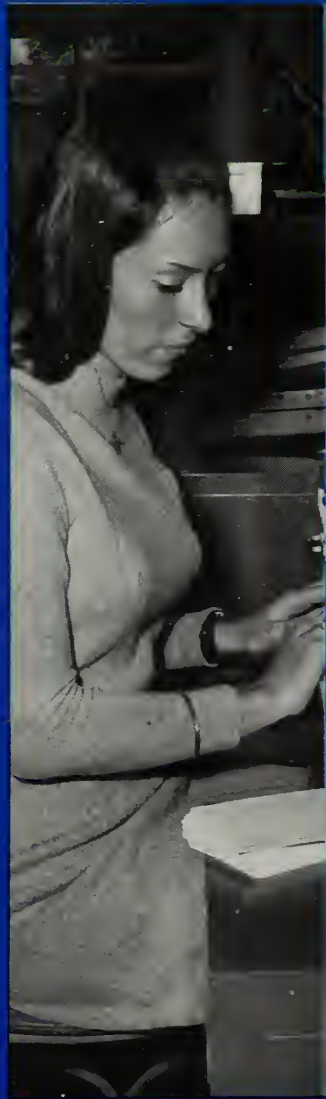

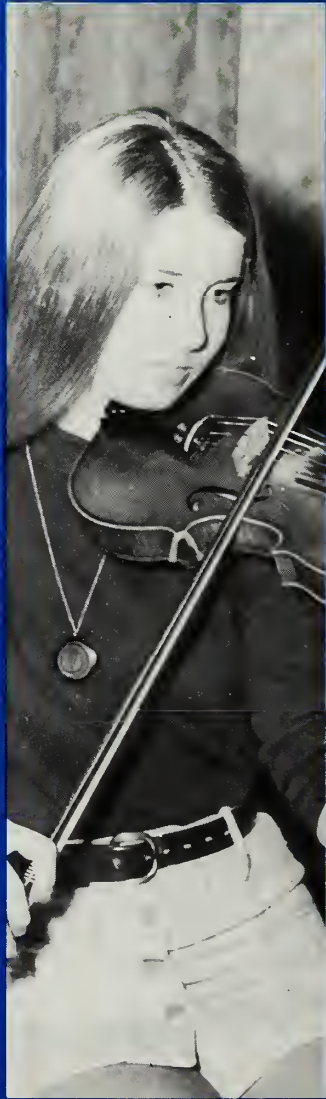

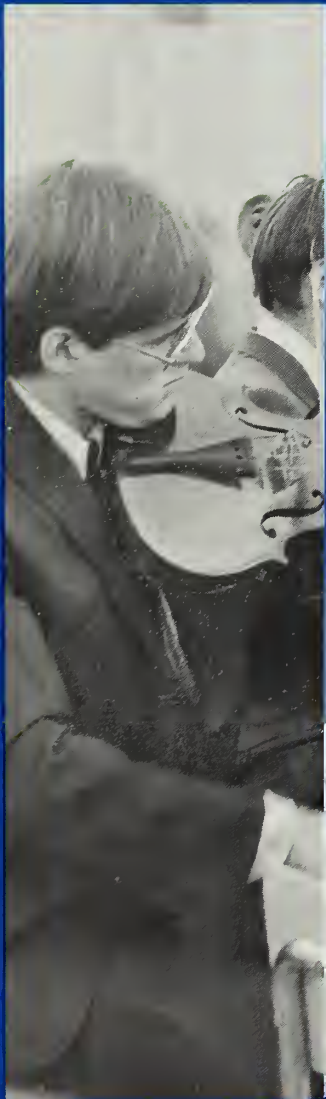

With the advent of a citywide reading emphasis, Howe's reading program became more extensive. To accommodate more students, the reading facilities moved into Room 227 under the new name, the Reading Center. Classes in Remedial Reading were offered for the first time. Vocabulary study was added to all levels of English. The Distributive Education class (DE) offered students the opportunity to for on-the-job training at local places of business. Half of the school day was spent in classes at Howe and half at work. Students worked in shoe stores, banks, carry out restaurants, and other eastside businesses.

Attitudes have changed over the last few years, and with the changing of individuals' attitudes has also come the changing of the individual himself. He is expanding to a wider scope and is now more interested in his world's problems. A war into which he may soon be drafted, a never-ending threat of pollution, a recent devaluation of American currency all affect the individual in his thoughts.

Closer to home, a recent mayoral election, a different form of government in Unigov, a federal case against the public schools he attends are bound to affect the individual. The individual is confronted with many ways of thinking. He is confronted with decisions that he has to make. The individual is searching for the answers he needs to make intelligent decisions so that in the end his decisions will leave, in their own small way, an affect on the environment around us.

Education

The educational processes have gone through a year of change. Teachers of all subjects have worked on reading skills with students in a citywide attempt to improve reading skills. Team teaching between departments was begun with the American studies class. Work study programs began in two departments to allow students on-the-job experience.

A program in the math department was dropped and the science calculator cancelled because of low funds. Classes were larger in an attempt to excuse as many students as possible from ninth hour assignments. German was added to the Foreign Language Department, and Biblical Literature was new in the English Department.

Administration Seeks Better Student Relations

Personnel Changes

Mandatory changes in the composition of the teaching staff were made in compliance with the federal ruling by Judge S. Hugh Dillon. Two former Howe teachers were transferred to

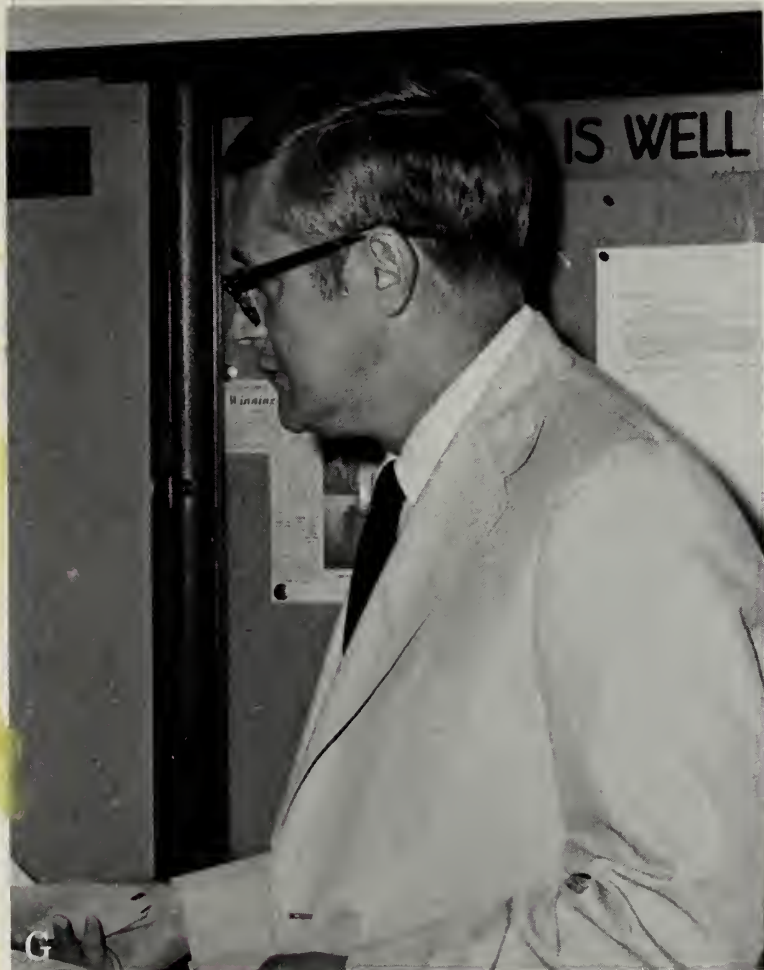

to Comply with Court Order

Crispus Attucks; in exchange, Howe received two new teachers from Attucks. Within the midst of these changes, the staff was reduced by three, to 125 persons. Three teachers left between semesters and one at the beginning of the second semester as a result of a drop of 250 in enrollment from September to February.

Academic Classes Participate In Reading Program

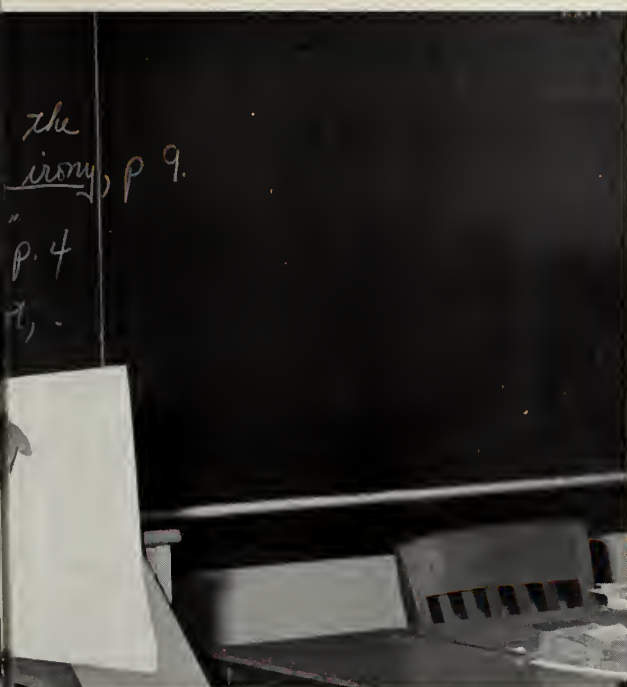

In accordance with the city-wide emphasis on reading, the Howe English Department elaborated on its reading improvement facilities, including all students in the program. The Reading Center moved into Room 227 which provided much more space for the equipment. Teachers were assigned to the center each period of the day. The center offered both corrective and developmental reading instruction. Teachers worked with as many students as possible. Students used the facilities of the lab during lunch halls, study halls, and unassigned first and ninth periods. Developmen-

Howe's ROTC Department was named one of the three top schools in the nation. Because of this distinction, pictures of the unit were taken for display on world-wide posters. The ROTC was also rated top in the city at the Annual Federal Inspec-

Reading Facilities Expand to New Location

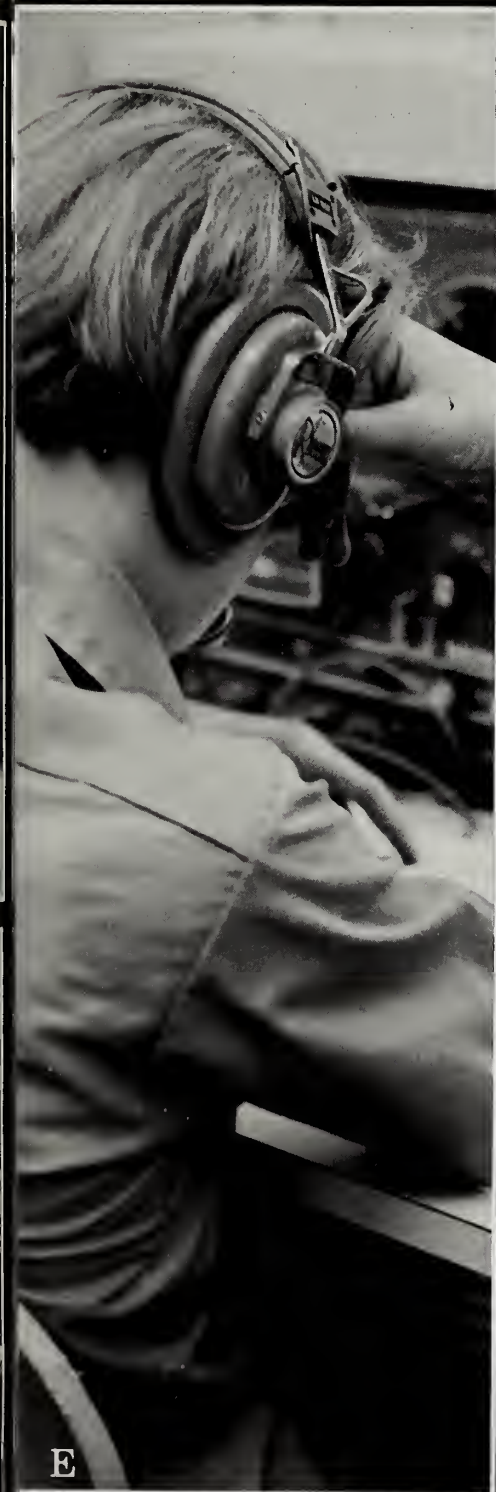

Several new academic activities were initiated during the '71-'72 school years including the Reading Center, Health Careers, and Distributive Education. The annual Mock Election was also among the activities of many of Howe's upper-classmen. An extensive reading program was developed to conform with a city wide emphasis on individual student reading abilities. The Reading Center, formerly located in Room 244, moved into larger quarters in Room 227. Reading pacers and tape recorders were in use in the Center as a teacher was assigned to the Center each period of the school day.

Twenty-four students were enrolled in Health Careers, an on-the-job training program. Initiated by the school nurse, Mrs. Norma Rauch, the course was open to seniors only and was primarily elected by those students planning careers in the field of medicine.

Students worked as nurses aides, lab technicians, unit clerks, veterinarian assistants, and assistants to speech therapists at Community Hospital, animal hospitals, and nursing homes.

The Distributive Education program, offered by the Business Department, helped bring the business world into the classroom. The class helped to bridge the gap between business theories taught in the classroom and their actual practice on the job.

DE was open to all juniors and seniors. Senior DE trainees spent half of the school day at business establishments in positions as sales clerks, stockmen, draftsmen, fryers, and cashiers.

Co-directors for the tourney were Mr. Rex Anderson and Mr. Dave Stewart. Carrying on the duties of Caddymaster for the annual event, Mr. Justin Rehm selected and tested each student wishing to become a caddy. To be eligible, a caddy test is administered to each applicant who is a student at Howe or a recent graduate. In the history of this event, all students have received passing marks on their first try. Once this test is passed, all are considered to be a "caddy-in-good-standing", with both boys and girls. Tee-off time is at one, with the last four-some completing their holes at seven. Mr. Harry Preston was named "Rookie of the Year", receiving the lowest of all first year Howe faculty members. Participation in varsity sports, entries into the foreign studies program, and representation at Boys' State and Girls' State were only a few of the activities of the class of '73. Talented juniors performed in various musical and dramatic productions. In May, juniors were inducted into National Honor Society, and Quill & Scroll, the national journalism honorary. Sophomores spent the year in many activities. Extracurricular clubs and organizations formed a large part of many sophomores' year. Dissecting animals in biology and writing their first term paper were new academic experiences for the class. Sophomores also built their first float for homecoming. The year climaxed with the promotion to upperclass status for the class of '74. Adjusting to high school life is the main activity of any freshman class. Forgetting locker combinations, dropping trays in lunch, and even having a freshman, Sandra Stepp, elected Football Homecoming Queen were memorable experiences to the members of the class of 1975. The 740 freshmen who entered in the fall comprised the largest freshman class ever at Howe.

Elation and sadness were expressed by the members of the senior class as they awaited the final event of high school. They were seated together on the football field, garbed uniformly in brown and gold, and as each student's name was called, he went to the podium to receive his diploma. Memories of the last year came to mind as the seniors awaited their high school diplomas. Senior homeroom, where you see everyone but hear little of the announcements over the noise reminded them of their first daily assignment. Cast members of "Cheaper by the Dozen" remembered the death of Mrs. Lillian Gilbreth, mother of the dozen, and also felt the loss of someone very close to them. Senior Winter Party and Senior Week Activities highlighted the year for many members of the class of '72. But there they were, in the stadium, awaiting their diplomas and the opening of the door to the future.

Evening Students Complete Requirements

Mr. David Baugh directed the Evening Division of classes at Howe. Classes were open to students sixteen years of age and older who were not enrolled in another high school. If there was ever a year when the saying "It's not whether you win or lose, but how you play the game" was as appropriate, it was the school year 1971-72. Howe's athletic teams were often unsuccessful in encounters with varsity squads from other area high schools. But enthusiasm within the Hornet teams was as great as ever before. There were high spots during the athletic events of the year. Pat Smith won the city title in wrestling for his weight bracket, and Paul Thomas won the city's number one tennis title. Underclassmen augmented the upperclassmen on the varsity teams and competed on junior varsity teams. Girls Athletic Association offered girls the opportunity to compete in team and individual sports with other girls at Howe. Monday night bowling leagues increased the number of students involved in intramurals.

Varsity Post 6-14 Record

The varsity netmen coached by Jim Stutz, met with an unfortunate season this year. The squad posted a distressing 6 and 14 season. The biggest problem of the team, as explained by Coach Stutz, was mainly size. Even with this problem, the team came through with an impressive 44% field goal average. The leading scorer on the squad was Dan Brown, averaging over twelve points a game. Rebounding was evenly distributed between Keith Conway, Jim Defur, and Dan Brown. Coach Stutz also mentioned as outstanding players, Louis Saba, and Kevin Culley. The J.V.s didn't fare much better than their varsity counterparts and came through the season with a 2 and 16 record. The team coached by Bob Mitchell had a respectable 42% field goal average, and shot well over 50% from the free-throw line. Scott Erikson led the team in rebounding, and the high point man on the squad was Tim Berdoll. The Freshmen posted a 2 and 15 record, finding their top scorers, Doug McQuire and Dave Depew being promoted to the J.V. squad.

The Varsity squad attended and won four blue ribbons. Shawn Whitridge and Carol Mount participated in the Miss Cheerleader Contest. Shawn placed in the top ten.

Students Participate in Intramurals

Intramural sports offered were basketball and bowling, which were for students who didn't have the time or skills for varsity sports. Intramural bowling sponsor was Mr. Richard Patterson. The season opened with its first game on November 1st, and closed with trophies awarded on March 13. Each Monday night after school, 128 students met at Play Bowl, where they spent approximately 1 1/2 hours competing against opposing teams. Intramural basketball was sponsored by Mr. Harry Preston and Mr. Richard Harpold.

Student Managers were kept busy cleaning equipment, recording statistics, and doing other tedious jobs.

Howe's coaching staff supported and directed all phases of athletics. A new addition to the staff this year was Mr. Albert Umphrey.

With fewer students remaining at Howe during the ninth period, fewer students became involved in the extra-curricular offerings at Howe this year. Because of lack of attendance, several clubs folded shortly after the start of the year. Organizations that met during school hours were active in school activities and community activities as well. Performing musical groups presented spring concerts in addition to numerous performances during the first semester. Aspiring journalists worked both during and after school to produce this year's publications. Service organizations worked towards improving Howe. Students inducted into honorary organizations reflected excellence in their fields of interest.

Junior members were selected from the upper 10% of their class for membership in this organization. The top 15% of the senior class were also inducted.

Fourteen Howe students participated in Quill and Scroll, a national Journalism honorary. Members were chosen for their work on the Hilltopper or Tower. Howe's literary magazine, Pen Points, was organized by the Quill and Scroll. The magazine was a representation of works from each of the levels of high school. Officers of the honorary were Jim Smith, Marti Hawkins, Debbie West and Jane Meade.

Occuring on Valentine's Day, the object was for each girl to keep the heart that she received in homeroom. She kept her heart if she was able to refrain from talking to any boys during the entire day. Junior Walter Wren was crowned King of Hearts on the following day with a total of 63 hearts, but he missed out on 210 hearts which were returned to Mrs. Patricia Alexander.

Speech, Quiz Teams Place Well In Interschool Meets

Mr. Ron Finkbiner coached the Howe Quiz Team, consisting of seniors Robert Eckert and Mark Reasoner, and juniors Albert Rossi and Paul Gerzon. In their initial match, the team won by a score of 64-32 in a televised match against Southport. Coach Finkbiner called the team one of the best teams he has coached.

Howe's National Forensic League was sponsored by Mr. Steven Briggs. The organization consisted of students who participated in meets around the city and the state. Members were mainly speech students who were interested in furthering their speech-making skills and techniques.

Hilltopper Staff Emphasizes Change

Changes at Howe were stressed in the planning of the 1972 Hilltopper. Writing copy, fitting headlines, cropping pictures, and spending long awaited vacations working on a deadline were just a few of the numerous activities of the 1972 Hilltopper staff. The staff's first project was in the planning of the 1971 Turnabout Twirl. Senior Marge Coffin headed the 16 member staff. Marge attended a yearbook institute at Indiana University to add to her knowledge of yearbook design. She was awarded a 1973 Arbutus Scholarship to I.U. In November, the staff received a Medalist rating from the Columbia Scholastic Press Association for the 1971 Hilltopper. This is one of the highest awards given to high school yearbooks.

Hawkins Heads Howe's Herald

Tower staffers, the reporters of all the news that's fit to print (and some that's not), began the year with a new look and new ideas for the bi-weekly publication. Jim Smith designed a new nameplate for the front page. The nameplate gave a more unconventional look to page one. A photo essay was featured in the six page Christmas issue. Other inserts for six page issues were designed by the Journalism classes. Senior Marti Hawkins served as Editor-in-Chief. Becky Horner and Debbie West were managing editors. Marti attended a newspaper workshop during the summer at Syracuse University in New York. In the fall, the Tower staff defeated the Hilltopper staff in a football game. And who could forget their April Fool issue?

Conducting the band and orchestra were Mr. Louis McEnderfer and Mr. Robert Beckley, respectively.

Department Offers "Oliver" as Ninth Musical Production

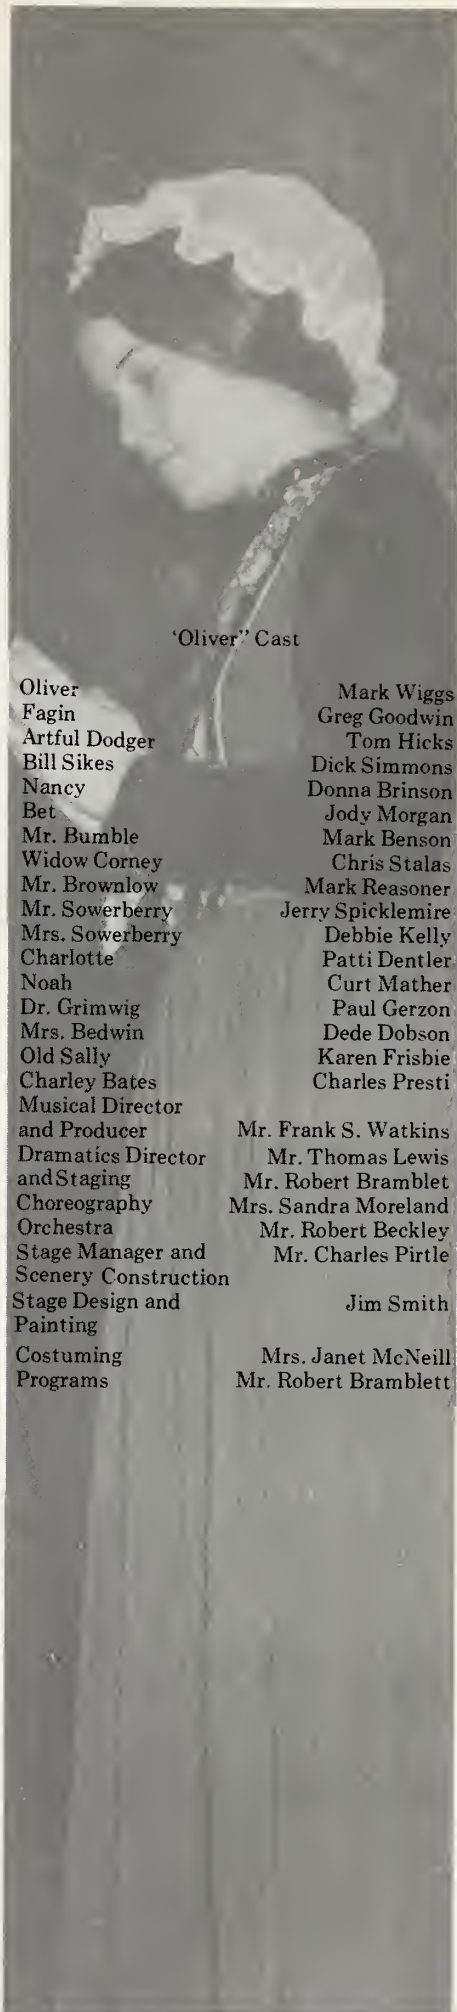

"Oliver," Howe's musical for 1972, is the story of an orphan. Oliver is unable to withstand the unappetizing diet and the conditions of the orphanage and is sold to the town undertaker. The boy escapes and soon finds himself roaming the streets of London where he is found by the Artful Dodger. Oliver is taken to Fagin's den where young pickpockets learn their trade.

Soon accepted by Fagin's gang, Oliver is taken on his first job. He is caught by a rich gentleman who later testifies to the boy's innocence and takes him home. Fagin, learning of Oliver's plight and fearing he will give away the gang's setup dispatches Nancy to get Oliver back. He is restored to the gang, but Nancy plots to return the lad to his benefactor.

"Cheaper by the Dozen" was performed by the class of '72 in the Howe auditorium on Saturday, November 20. The play concerns the family life of an efficiency expert, his wife, twelve children, and a dog. The father, played by Gary Baker, tries to run his family like a factory. Everything must be done with precision on time. His wife and children go along with all of his ideas until the oldest daughter, Anne, played by Laurie Leamon, rejects some of her father's old-fashioned ideas so that she can be like the other girls. Mrs. Hariette Baker directed the play. Junior Betsy Spice served as Student Director. Other teachers contributing to the play were Mr. Charles Pirtle, Director of Productions, and Mr. Richard Hammond, Sound Equipment. The Howe orchestra conducted by senior members played at intermissions.

A. Linda Showalter presents a honky-tonk piano version of "Bill Bailey." B. This group appears rather topsy-turvy dancing on their heads, but it seems they've mastered the skill. C. These hip nuns danced across the stage with blummers showing. D. "Up with raisians; down with protein" is the point this group is trying to get across. E. Members of the String Ensemble provide a change in pace with the popular ballad, "You've Got a Friend." F. This growing plant seems to have grown too much for even Greg Goodwin to handle.

At this year's Pleasant Run Varieties, students displayed diverse talents in music and dance, as well as humor. Gary Baker and Chris Stalas served as Master and Mistress of Ceremonies. Among the instrumental solos was Linda Showalter's honky-tonk rendition of "Bill Bailey." Technical difficulties plagued a rock band. Hula dancing was displayed by Marsha Downey and Dianne Droeger, while Tom Hicks demonstrated his talent at Jazz dancing. The "Raisins" and an eccentric woman who searched for George were just a few of the humorous points of the show. Jerry Spicklemire, who with Greg Goodwin, arranged the finale for the show, led the cast in "I'd Like to Teach the World to Sing."

Revelers-Thespians Present Several One Act Plays

Of the many organizations at Howe, probably the most dramatic is that of Revelers-Thespians. To be a Reveler is simply to have an interest in acting or in behind the scenes work, and to join the group. Requirements for becoming a Thespian, a member of a national dramatics organization, are 100 hours of work either on stage or behind the scenes here at Howe, in church plays, or on the speech and debate team. The Revelers-Thespians first production of the school year was the "Happy Journey." As Student Director, Sheila McGuire selected the play and the cast and then worked with the cast up until performance time. Several other one act plays were presented as the year progressed. Mrs. Harriette Baker sponsored the club this year. Junior Betsy Spice was elected President.

Extracurricular Clubs Plan Activities For '71-'72 School Year

Extracurricular clubs offered students a variety of interest areas for after school participation. The Chess Club participated in inter-school meets and in the State Chess Meet in April. Chess strategy was discussed at meetings. Future Teachers of America planned field trips to other schools to gain insight into other systems of education. Members of the History Club planned to make a replica of several early communities in Indiana. Latin Club, open to all enrolled in Latin, elected officers in the spring and held their annual slave sale in the fall. The Home Ec Club was open to all girls interested in furthering their study of Home Ec. The Science Club planned field trips to local places of scientific and industrial natures. Members of the Naturalist Club viewed the moon and Mars from the Howe roof during an evening expedition early in the year. Atom Dust published Scientific news stories once a month.

Royalty Crowned at Howe Social Events

Formal and semi-formal dances were the social highlight of the school year. The Turn-About Twirl, Howe's girl-ask-boy affair, topped the spring semester with "An Evening in Paris." "A Time for Us" was the theme of the 1971 Junior Prom. The annual Brown and Gold, held on October 9, 1971, was the first dance of the Howe social season. "Witches' Cove" was the theme of the dance. Tower staffers sponsored the Sweetheart Dance on February 5 with the theme "The Carnival." The Annual ROTC Military Ball displayed a military atmosphere with the theme, "Our American Heritage," on February 20.

In producing the 1972 Hilltopper, we have tried to emulate the atmosphere of Howe High School this year. From people and their attitudes to classes, changes have been evident in almost every facet of school life. The seniors have experienced the changing of the curriculum and the dress code, the addition of two portable classrooms, and the completion of the stadium classrooms as well as rooms 268 and 269. By the time the present freshmen reach their senior year, an equal number of changes will have been made. In depicting change, we have used something completely new: the lettering on the cover and on the first 15 pages of the book was developed by Mr. Steve Lietz of American Yearbook expressly for the Hilltopper. It is our sincere desire that in the '72 yearbook, we have captured the feeling of change for the future as well as for the present.
